Dear Mr. Rubin,

I am most grateful for your invitation to address the Yale Political Union during the January-April time frame. Since I will be leaving office this month, however, and my plans for the immediate future are not yet settled, I must regretfully decline your kind offer.

My best wishes for a successful debate

Yours sincerely,

On behalf of the Yale Political Union, I cordially invite you to address us as part of a keynoted debate. Since its founding almost a half-century ago, the Political Union has served as the center for political discussion and debate at Yale. In the past year we have sponsored keynoted debates on such topics as National Health Insurance, capital punishment and gun control. The topic that I thought you might like to give an address on is the Central Intelligence Agency.

The date for this debate is still to be worked out, with any Sunday-Thursday from mid-January to mid-April as a possibility (please let me know what is good for you). The plan that we usually follow for the evening is a dinner with Union members, followed by a press conference, and then the debate. The general format of our keynoted debates is addresses by the keynoting experts, followed by questions and student speeches, and the finally summing up speeches by the experts. Of course this is a flexible schedule, so if any part of it causes problems for you, please contact me and we will try to work something out.

As for financial arrangements, the Political Union can not offer an honorarium. However, we would be happy to reimburse you for transportation costs, as well as provide you with accommodations on campus should you choose to spend the night.

While I would prefer to welcome you as an expert in a keynoted debate, if this is not possible, perhaps you could give an independent address. In any event, I look forward to hearing from you either to accept our invitation or with any questions that you might have. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Joel D. Rubin
